NEW MONEY DESIGNS.

FEATURES OF THE ONE AND TWO-DOLLAR SILVER CERTIFICATES.

Handsome Portraits of Martha Washington and Gen. W. S. Hancock to Adorn Them—Counterfeiters to Be Halted by a Free Use of Lathe Work.

New money and new money designs always interest the public, and it is probable that every newspaper reader will examine with curiosity the first account published of the new one and two-dollar silver certificates recently authorized by congress, the designs for which have just been approved by the secretary of the treasury and Treasurer Jordan. Mr. Jordan has in his office the first proof of the front and back of the new ten-dollar silver certificate, which has already been described. It is a great improvement upon the silver certificate of the same denomination now in use, having a fine large central vignette portrait of the late Thomas A. Hendricks in a square panel, and an abundance of excellent lettering in panels and lathe work, without being crowded. The back is solid mass of intricate lathe work, except in the center, where the legend describing the character of the note is very distinctly carried.

NEW DOLLAR CERTIFICATE.
The new one-dollar certificate, now in the hands of the engraver, will be a beautiful thing to look at. The one-dollar silver certificate, familiar to everybody, with its fine vignette portrait of Washington, was always held as one of the best pieces of work ever turned out of the bureau. The new note will be, in a sense, a match for it. The principal feature is the vignette portrait. This is a copy of the Stuart portrait of Martha Washington, generally regarded as the most attractive of all the portraits of the first president's wife. This portrait has never been used upon any of the money or securities of the government. It is of large size, and occupies a place at the left end of the certificate. Above the portrait in a curved panel are the words "Silver Certificate" and below it is the counter supporting the head are the words "One Dollar." To the left of the portrait, on the extreme end of the note, the words "One" and "Silver Certificate" are repeated in a bar made up of lathe-work designs, and in the upper and lower corners the figure 1 is prominent upon a lathe-work background. In the center the conspicuous feature is a scroll enclosing the words "One Silver Dollar" upon a handsome lathe-work background. This is about central on the certificate, the description of the certificate above and below being tastefully wrought and in original designs.

THE TWO-DOLLAR BILL.
The face of the $2 certificate will command itself to every admirer of handsome paper money. At the left is a fine portrait of Gen. W. S. Hancock, taken from a photograph selected by the treasury department and approved by them. It presents Gen. Hancock in the uniform of a major general, wearing his broad sash. The work is very finely finished, and will be pronounced a superior specimen of engraving. A distinctive feature in the center is the scroll enclosing the words "United States" in large letters, in an ornamental panel, with the words "Two Dollars" and "Silver Certificate" in well proportioned designs of lesser size in neat letters upon a lathe-work background. In the upper and lower right hand corners appear Arabic numerals upon elaborate lathe-work counters, with the words "Two Dollars" repeated upon the scroll. The seal is printed upon the lower right hand corner. The peculiarity of the green back of the $2 certificate is a scroll suggestive of a figure 2 occupying nearly the entire length of the certificate, with square-cornered, oblong end pieces. The work on the back, excepting the legend, which is carried in the scroll, is of lathe work, and the words "United States" "Silver Certificate" and "Two Dollars" will be repeated many times in the central design and in the ornamental hand-wrought border. The object of the bureau of engraving and printing has been to obtain security through fine work, and it is believed that the free use of lathe work, together with fine portrait work, will make these notes practically impossible of successful imitation.—Washington Cor. New York Sun.

Horses Delight in Sea Bathing.
"It was my habit," said a gentleman just returned from a visit at Cape May to a reporter, "to go to the beach daily at the hour for the horses to bathe, and a great pleasure I found it to watch them. The noble fellows came down over the sand, tossing their heads and impatiently pawing, evidently full of eager anticipation. Once in the water they waded or swam about on the fine, smooth beach, ducking their heads in the breakers and tossing the spray like a pack of huge Newfoundland mastiffs. The grooves found it difficult to get them out and back to their quarters. One of the men in charge told me how well horses thrive during a sea-bath residence. The briny air is a bracing tonic to them, and the salt water imparts a satin smoothness to their coats."

"At Saratoga, too, equines improve on the waters as much as their masters; more, perhaps, for they do not have the counteracting influence of late hours and rich eating, not to mention the more serious dissipation of the spa. I have seen horses there led regularly to the spring every morning for their dose, and a quantity of the medicinal liquid carried away for grooming purposes. A good rubbing down with spring water acts like a polishing brush, and a horse's sides fairly glisten in their lustre of gloss after it. But it costs a nice little sum to have painful of congress or inhuman dealt out every day, and it is not every man who can afford to cool his stable in that way."—New York Times Interview.

A Sioux Indian Wedding.
The Sioux Indians celebrate in a rather odd manner the marriage of a member of their tribe. Lately such an event came off, and afterward about fifty of the braves, including the bride couple, took a tramp of several days over the territory, picking up some of the night and giving dances and other festivities.—Chicago Herald.

William W. Astor, who has $7,000,000 to look after, is taking time to write a play.

Very Important Matter.
Clara (Bobby's big sister)—I found father calling you a little while ago, Bobby.
Bobby—Did he say Robert or Bobby?
Clara—He said Robert.
Bobby (with a serious look in his eyes)—Then I guess I had better see what he wants.—Harper's Bazar.
